

"This is my first time using Figma or any design tool, so everything feels new. Creating an account on Figma was a unique experience; I used my Humber email and had never gone through the verification process before. After that, I joined our class group on Figma, where we learned about the importance of Hick's Law and Fitt's Law. The professor also guided us in an icebreaker activity for the class exercise.

I then began Assignment 1, which involved creating a player card using a template provided by the professor. At first, I was unsure which picture to use for my profile. I considered an anime avatar but chose a professional look and uploaded my facebook photo instead. I included all the necessary content in the required format and took a quiz on the Humber Blackboard portal, which indicated that my Adobe Creative Type is "Adventurer," so I added that to the format along with all the other details.

I was still determining the background choice, as I prefer simplicity, so I opted for an image with subtle colours. For the main text, I used red because it's my favourite colour, and I chose medium dark for the background with a white outline for questions and black for answers."
